Passage 2

Many of us struggle to part with treasured belongings, but for years Stephanie Evans felt compelled to hang on to just about everything she'd ever bought. As a result, her hallway and living room were filled with high stacks of books and magazines. Her bedroom, meanwhile, was so full of piles of clothes that, until recently, she had to sleep on the sofa in the living room. Stephanie suffers from hoarding disorder, thought to affect an estimated 3.4 million people in the UK to some degree. But, like many, she didn't think it was something doctors would treat, so she didn't seek help.

In fact, hoarding is a recognized medical disorder where people repeat certain
